35 Get Honors Awards

Thirty-five of the 90 University of Kentucky Honors Program students have received scholarship awards, valued at $50 each, for having maintained an academic average of 3.5 throughout their college careers.

The students received the awards from UK President Frank G. Dickey at an informal program yesterday in the Chemistry-Physics Building.

Freshman recipients were: Nancy Coleman, Lexington; James Huey, Walton; and Wilson Sebastian, Covington.

Also recognized were four other freshmen who received awards last fall from the Lexington Rotary Club: Martha Dodd, St. Albans, W. Va.; Dorothy Harkin, Ft. Knox; Philip Palmgreen, Lexington; and Ben Williams, Stanton.

Nineteen juniors who received awards were: Larry Beach, Lexington; Shade Carr, Park Hills; James Conkleton, Lexington; Richard Eckel, Lincoln, Neb.; Mary Evans, Henderson; Glenn Graber, A. Island; George Harper, St. Albans, W. Va.; Glenda Harwood, Henderson; Eric Henson, Lexington; Lambert King, Muncie, Ind.; Norman Lyons, Owensboro; Marilyn Meredith, Smiths Grove.

Horticulturist To Retire

W. W. Magill, Agricultural Extension Service horticulturist at UK for 41 years, will retire June 1.

Magill has served with the Extension Service since 1922. He is noted as a specialist in fruit and berry raising and is known throughout the South and Midwest as a promoter of strawberries as an additional cash crop for one-acre areas.

Magill's associates in the Department of Horticulture are honoring him with a dinner to be held at 6 p.m. May 27 at the Congress Inn.

Magill has served with the Purdue University Department of Entomology and with the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

European Tours

All persons interested in the 1964 English, art, and French tours abroad should meet with Dr. Jane Haselden Tuesday at 4 p.m. in Room 306, Miller Hall.

It Is Legal?

Look who'll be gracing a courtroom in a couple of years—Margo Waite, this week's Kernel Sweetheart. Miss Waite, a junior pre-law major, is from Santa Ana, Calif.

Space Speaker

Dr. Donald E. Gault, an associate of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will give the last in a series of space study talks at the University of Kentucky.

The program will be presented in Room 148 of the Chemistry-Physics Building at 2 p.m. Monday.

Phi Beta Kappa Initiates Sixteen

The University chapter of Phi Beta Kappa initiated 16 new members Wednesday in ceremonies at the UK Faculty Club.

The new initiates—15 seniors and one junior—were selected on the basis of outstanding academic work and on the students' dedication to ideals of philosophy, morality, and literature.

The 16 initiates and their major study areas are:

Rebecca Barlow, Carlisle, economics; Bradley B. Cox, Lancaster, physics; Gerald Ray Culley, Lexington, classics; Carol Kay Daugherty, Big Stone, Va., modern foreign languages; Philip Michael Fox, Madisonville, zoology.

Douglas W. Hatfield, Midland, Texas, history; William L. Herrin, Bowling Green, English; Linda Sue Hoffman, Lexington, psychology; James K. Powell, Owensboro, English; Ted A. Ramsey, Somerset, chemistry.

Carolyn Ann Reid, Owensboro, speech pathology; Bonita J. Robinson, Louisville, English; Harold D. Rosdeutscher, Franklin, arts-medical; Glynda Sue Stephens, Williamsburg, English; Carita Kirk White, Louisville, journalism; and Elizabeth Ann Wright, Brea, Calif., microbiology.

J. Max Patrick, New York University, addressed the UK chapter on "Infinite Variety: The Cleopatra Theme in World Literature," at a banquet Wednesday night at Tates Creek Country Club.

Interfaith Council Designates Segregated Off-Campus Restaurants

By NICK POPE
Kernel Daily Editor

The Interfaith Council released a report yesterday listing nine near campus restaurants which will serve Negro students and six that will not serve them.

A check with the restaurants, however, showed that one eating place the council had listed as segregated will serve Negro students. The one establishment is Adams'.

The council's action follows a letter submitted to several campus organizations. The letter recommended that action be taken by these organizations to bring integration to restaurants and other businesses located near the campus.

After the letter was read and approved by various campus organizations, groups of Negro and white students visited each of the restaurants near the campus and presented the letter to the managers and explained its purpose and asked for their cooperation.

After the managers of the restaurants were given time to consider the letters, groups of Negro and white students visited the eating places and tested them to see whether they were segregated or integrated, and to see whether the actual policy in practice was the policy reported by the manager.

After visiting the restaurants, the Interfaith Council reports the following restaurants to be integrated: Lucas', the Toddle House, the Two Keys, Hale's Pharmacy, Will Dunn Drug, Pasquale's, The Huddle, Jerry's, South Limestone only, and Crane's.

The Council has listed as segregated these eating places: Barrett's, the Dutch Mill, the O.K. Grill, the Paddock, and the Plantation. The council listed Adams' Steak house as being segregated, but when this reporter talked with the owner and manager, John Innes, he made the following statement:

"A few days ago a Negro couple entered to be served, they came right at dinner time, it was very crowded in the dining room and I offered them the only available table. They acted very indignant and left without being served."

"I have witnesses to the fact that they were University students and that they were offered service as courteously as any other customer and that they left without being served. We have always maintained a policy of integration and will continue to do so."

Keith Burchett, president of the Interfaith Council said that on initial contact they were satisfied that Adams' would serve Negro students.

"We were satisfied at this time the service was equal. The second phase was the test group and they found they were not offered service at the location where they desired to sit. Upon this recommendation the committee listed Adams' policy as one of discrimination."

"If however, the restaurant wishes to go on record of having a policy of equal service to all, it should indeed mean a policy of no discrimination in the use of the facilities. If they are to be allowed to eat, they should be allowed the choice of seating arrangements as is customarily offered patrons."

"If the management of the restaurant feels its views are unfairly represented in this matter, we shall be more than ready to change its listing as we will any other of the restaurants so designated segregated, when we are satisfied that its policy is no longer one of discrimination."

The committees which visited the restaurants to present the signed letter to them talked with the managers and asked them if they intended to maintain the same policy and if they would consider changing their policy if they were already segregated.

The managers were told that a list of the segregated and non-segregated restaurants would be published in the Kernel so students would have the opportunity to discontinue their patronage if they should so choose.

Commerce Construction Is Scheduled

Construction will begin next week on a new $1.6 million commerce building, Dr. Cecil Carpenter, dean of the college, announced yesterday.

The building will be located on the east side of South Limestone Street, where the recently-built parking lot is located. The anticipated completion date is September, 1964.

Formal groundbreaking ceremonies will be held at 3:30 p.m. Monday on the building site.

The contract for the construction, which was awarded to the V. L. Nicholson Co. of Knoxville, Tenn., was signed in Frankfort May 8.

White Hall, the present commerce building, has been used for 93 years. It will be converted to office space, according to University officials.

Phi Beta Kappa Initiates

Young Republicans

The Young Republicans recently elected new officers. The officers are from the left, Susan Myers, secretary; Theodore Walter, president; Peyton Wells, vice president; and Priscilla Lynd, treasurer.

SEC Response On Integration Good

President Frank G. Dickey has reported that his discussions with the 11 presidents of Southeastern Conference schools have shown an encouraging response to Kentucky's efforts to integrate athletic teams.

The move toward integration, he went on, "has every possibility of developing in such a way that there will be no major difficulties." He added that he hoped to have some plan acceptable to all concerned by the time he leaves UK July 1.

At the next meeting of the Athletic Board, May 20, a report of his discussions with the SEC presidents will be submitted and plans made to implement the integration policy.

"We're at a kind of crossroads right now," said Dr. Dickey.

Dr. Dickey would not reveal how many schools said they could play against integrated UK teams now or felt they could after consultations with their trustees of other governing boards.

When the Athletic Board meets, Dr. Dickey will give them the number of institutions who now have no policy that would prevent them from playing against UK teams using Negroes.

Georgia Tech already has said it will play against integrated teams and it is governed by the same regents who supervise the University of Georgia. Vanderbilt and Tulane indicated going along with Kentucky. Florida played against an integrated Penn State football team in the last Gator Bowl game at Jacksonville, Fla.

Social Whirl

By NANCY LONG

Undoubtedly the presses have been fixed and the Kernel has arrived on campus today. I say undoubtedly because it must be if you have gotten this far in the column. Brilliant deduction I know.

Forty-two million people have been asking about the whereabouts of the Kernel. I was seriously thinking of wearing a sign on my back but then there are always some grubs who'd say who cares? And that question I couldn't answer. So for the last time, THE PRESSES HAVE BEEN BROKEN THIS WEEK. If you note the disappearance of the paper any time in the future, do not assume that our reporters were waylaid at Adams, or lost in the Med Center, because they are equipped with compass and anti-temptation pills—they will get the job done. But the presses... Who invented machinery anyway?

This is the last big weekend for awhile, that is unless you're a four point member of the Key Club and have decided that finals are passe. In other words, all you peasants who missed the Phi Beta Kappa banquet Wednesday night (the food was excellent) finals are creeping up. So make this one a good one.

The Phi Delt's were out in masse Tuesday. They were presenting their Shekiah's with sail-on hats inscribed endearingly in blue paint. A Shekiah is a girl pledge to the fraternity, and this is their Help Week. After initiation, the Shekiah's will celebrate the finish in grand form at the Phi Delt Formal Weekend at Harington Woods.

Seems like more than one fraternity is escaping today. The Delt's are beginning tonight with a hootenanny at the Mahan Farm and are leaving Saturday morning for Mammoth Cave—the scene of their formal. The Ma-rooms will be making the trip with them, and on the agenda is dancing under the stars and Cooper if he decides he likes outdoor space well enough to stay until Saturday.

The Kappa Sig's are going to Frankfort to the Holiday Inn for their formal splurge, and winding up by partying at the lake.

Pi Beta Phi sorority is celebrating the oncoming of Final Week in grand style Saturday afternoon. They are inviting the campus to participate in an all afternoon session featuring the Nightcrawlers at Sleepy Hollow. The festivities begin at one and come to an uproarious halt at five. Ya'll come.

Phi Gamma Delta fraternity is heading toward Mt. Sterling for their Fiji Island Party. The Impacts will be beating the native sounds at the Sid Caulk Lake, and the Fijis will be dressed in typical native attire.

All the uke strummers are remaining here for the hootenanny Sunday night in back of Memorial Hall. Anyone can participate, and its the first open hootenanny UK has seen. Alpha Tau Omega is sponsoring the session and would appreciate all participants to inform them of their talents by Saturday.

The Lambda Chi and Phi Tau pledges are getting together fraternally for a rope pull Saturday afternoon. They're stretching across a creek and the first man in the water declares the losing side. The trophy is a toilet seat no less.

Canterbury Club is sponsoring a picnic at 1 p.m. tomorrow in Blue Grass Park. Be sure and register for the event.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

MEETINGS

Phi Sigma Iota

Phi Sigma Iota, language honorary, will hold its spring picnic at 4 p.m. Sunday at Bluegrass Park. All members and their guests are invited.

BSU

Big final picnic in honor of all seniors. BSU invites everyone to attend. The picnic will be held at Natural Bridge on Saturday. If planning to go, meet at the BSU at 1 p.m. Saturday. Transportation will be provided.

Westminster Fellowship

Westminster Fellowship will have a picnic from 2:30 to 6:30 p.m. Sunday in the Pisgah Presbyterian Church yard in Woodford County. W. F. officers for next year will be installed at that time. There will be no regular W. F. program that evening.

Blazer Hall Lexington Tour

A tour of historical places in Lexington will be held Sunday by Blazer Hall. The guest speaker will be Dr. Thomas Clark of the History Department. The tour will follow a dinner in Blazer Hall's cafeteria at 12:30 p.m. Transportation will be provided for the tour which will begin at 1:30 p.m. Everyone interested in attending should meet in front of the dorm at 1:30 p.m.

SPRING FORMALS

Kappa Alpha Theta

Kappa Alpha Theta will hold its Spring Formal tonight at Tates Creek Country Club. The Fabulous Crowns from Griffin, Ga., will play.

Alpha Gamma Delta

Alpha Gamma Delta will hold its formal tonight at the Spring Valley Country Club. The Temptations will play.

Dale Winters, a freshman elementary education major from Louisville, to Tim Nicolas, a junior commerce major from Louisville and a member of Alpha Tau Omega.

Senior Picnic

A picnic for graduating seniors and their families will be held at 4 p.m. Thursday, May 23, at Spindletop Hall.

Activities will include a barbecue and tours of Spindletop Mansion.

Sabin Type III Vaccine Cleared

Another Sabin Oral program will be held in Fayette County this Sunday. Unlike the first two clinics, however, some apprehension exists in the minds of the public concerning Type III Sabin Oral Vaccine.

Last fall the United States Public Health Service took Type III Vaccine off the market, but has since given its approval for mass distribution of the polio preventative. The vaccine was removed from use when several persons showed symptoms of Type III polio after having taken the vaccine. Dr. Hugh S. Fulmer, director of Sabin Oral Sundays, has said that such cases could have occurred because Type III is one of the most common types of polio and these people would have contacted the disease even if they had not taken the Sabin formula.

Each of these cases developed in persons over 30 years of age. There is no danger to the college age student, and the danger to those over 30 is "infinitesimally small," Dr. Fulmer said. He added that the risk is no greater than not taking the vaccine, and said he would not hesitate to take the vaccine himself, or to have his friends take it.

This spring Louisville used Type III vaccine in a mass immunization program. No repercussions have occurred.

Now that the U. S. Public Health Service has given the green light to the use of the vaccine all students and faculty members have the obligation to take advantage of this free immunization. We advocate taking Type III vaccine for several reasons.

First, Salk polio vaccine protects only the individual. A person who has taken the Salk vaccine can still be a carrier of polio. By taking all three doses, the individual frees himself from the possibility of attack by the disease and also eliminates the individual as a carrier.

Second, Dr. Fulmer reports polio cannot survive when 80 percent of the population has been immunized. The clinics for Types I and II immunized slightly over 80 percent of the people in Fayette County. A turnout of 80 percent or above for Type III vaccine will eliminate all types of polio from Fayette County.

Third, there is no waiting, no shots, no fuss.

Should Seniors Take Finals

Now that the time for all good seniors to don their caps and gowns is creeping inexorably nearer, a question has been brought to us that deserves some consideration. This question is whether graduating seniors should be required to take final exams.

Although it is probably too late to do anything about the situation this semester, we would like to suggest that graduating seniors be excused from final exams. There are valid reasons for this suggestion.

First of all, the IBM machines will be working overtime, along with their caretakers, to have the grades available by graduation day. If last semester is any indication of the accuracy of the grade sheets, it is possible that many people may not graduate—through no fault of their own.

Secondly, the harried professor, belabored by end-of-the-semester pressure, would be spared the trouble of dealing with the seniors.

Third, if senior grades were sent to the registrar a week before finals, or during finals week, they could be processed before the great flux of remaining grades come in.

By doing this, if any individual problems arise concerning graduation, there would be time to make adjustments and corrections.

Fourth, the senior, with tongue hanging and heels dragging, would be spared much anguish and frustration. And, as we mentioned, if there was any question of his grades he would have time to straighten things out.

We do know there are many professors who already voluntarily excuse graduating seniors from final exams.

We would like to urge other faculty members to do the same, or better yet, we would like to see some standard policy established to allow graduating seniors exemption from finals.

Colleges Agents Of Adjustment, Says Psychologist

Does American Society Kill Creativity

By DR. JOHN E. DREUDAHL
Assistant Professor of Psychology
University of Miami
The Miami Hurricane

There has developed an attitude that science—not as a method, but as subject matter—is the answer to all the world's problems.

This has resulted in the accumulation of "dry bones, techniques, precision, huge mountains of itty bitty facts" that have little to do with life in general and the basic problems of man.

Granted that the accumulation of facts and of data are basic to progress, but they do not, can not, and will not produce progress by themselves. What produces progress of any sort is the man who uses these facts. The human who behaves!

This leaves us with the problem of human behavior as the most all pervading and pressing problem in any area of endeavor, but especially in those areas that demand progress, discovery and application—to be explicit, CREATION.

What are our contemporary educational institutions doing to promote or to diminish creativity? What is the average college student taught today?

I'm very much afraid that he is being taught to behave in an orthodox, accepting, conforming and routine fashion. He is not taught basic techniques as a means of further progress, but he is taught them as an end in themselves.

Too many courses offer only subject matter and the student who attempts to "use" it rather than "parrot" it is too often penalized by an insecure instructor who cannot deal with anything new, because it is new and therefore frightening.

Our whole educational system seems to be organized for the purpose of glorifying and defying some "authority" and for suppressing individual thinking. Our entire social system seems to be devoted to this same end.

The concepts of adjustment and conformity have replaced the previously held ideals of liberty, individuality and personal honesty. In order to get along in society or in college, one must suppress his individuality in favor of conformity to the current social temper.

Our institutions of higher learning, which should be the citadels of freedom—freedom of expression, ideation, opinion and speech—have become instead agents of the adjustment myth.

Why do we have all this emphasis on the maintenance of the status quo and the approbation of our fellow creatures?

First, because we are an insecure people and second, because we are taught from the cradle that the ultimate in life is not adherence to personal principle but that it is the approbation of our fellows.

Too many of us have reached the point where we must have this approval—even if it leads to intellectual suicide.

And lest this seem too far fetched a conclusion, it might be pointed out that in Japan not too long ago actual suicide was much preferred to social rejection or disapproval.

Let me describe the creative person for you. He is controversial in his opinions and ideas, independent, radical, critical and inclined to be somewhat short with less able colleagues.

He is not gregarious nor is he respectful of the social niceties. He belongs to few if any social groups and because of his somewhat bohemian nature does not even belong to a structured social class.

His loyalties are generally not specific; principles inspire him, expediency infuriates him. He does not identify with civic groups and he rarely becomes a well integrated member of any broad social community.

He is in essence what the sociologists would call a marginal man—one who remains on the periphery of most close knit social groups, sometimes participating but never becoming a member.

He is a controversialist par excellence and thrives only in an atmosphere of freedom where personal idiosyncracies are tolerated and diversity of opinion is encouraged.

Enforced adjustment and the blanket of conformity smother him, and in a short while—as a creator, he dies.

It must be obvious at this time, in view of the foregoing description, that many present-day university campuses and research laboratories are sterile and barren grounds for the creator.

Educationally and psychologically we took the wrong track a few years ago and if the human race is to survive, we had better turn the university campuses into arenas of social and intellectual controversy and dispose of the social club atmosphere, the "team" approach, and the adjustment myth.

I do not want to deprive those who want nothing more than to be a cog in a well oiled machine of their goal. It is, I will admit, a comfortable if unexciting life.

But I do suggest that we give those who have the capacity and ambition to be something more the opportunity to be individuals and not be forced into the mold of routine.

At this point you may be wondering why such drastic changes in our social and educational institutions are deemed necessary. Why have I engaged in such vitriolic polemic?

There is no law against deviation and if people want to be deviates they can, regardless of the pressures for social adjustments and conformity. You might argue that they are free agents within rather broad limits to be what they like.

My response to this is that individuals are not in fact free agents but are rather the products of their culture. For the most part they are what they are taught to be. And what are they taught to be in our present society?

As soon as a child can understand even gestures and facial expressions he is subject to the constant threat,

"do this or mother won't love you." Inasmuch as mother and love are very clearly associated with gratification of the basic human drives necessary to life, the child soon learns that blind obedience to parental dictates is virtually the equivalent of life.

Soon this "conditional love" becomes associated with his peer relationships, his teachers and eventually his colleagues.

Unless he experiences along the way situations in which adjusting to and pleasing other people is not met with need gratification, he will become an adult without the ability to do anything that might result in disapproval.

He will become a person to whom being a good fellow and being liked by everybody is as necessary as life itself.

If he has the capacity to be creative, which means at the very least to think differently, he will find his thought process emotionally blocked—because differentness has been too long associated with disapproval and rejection and he has never learned to tolerate these.

In order to avoid discomfort he will unconsciously, without being aware of it himself, avoid any action or idea that has not been labelled by someone else—preferably an authority figure—as safe and acceptable.

What my remarks are leading to is the suggestion that because of our neurotic emotional needs we are placing social adjustment above personal principle. In so doing we are sinking behaviorally and creatively to the level of the mass man, the average person, the lowest common denominator; and we are slowly but inevitably signing the death warrant of our culture.

"Do what everybody else does" is the prevalent pervading injunction of modern American culture, and a more sterile injunction for creation and for progress would be completely beyond my comprehension.

UK Music Conference Features Henry Smith

By LIZ WARD
Kernel Assistant Managing Editor

The University chapter of the Music Educators National Conference recently sponsored a brass and conducting clinic featuring Henry Smith, solo trombonist with the Philadelphia Symphony and conductor of the band and orchestra at Temple University.

Besides his duties with the Symphony and at Temple, Mr. Smith has also been the guest conductor and clinician at several clinics similar to the one held at UK and has been the band conductor for the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Mich.

Mr. Smith believes that there is no basic difference in the technique for conducting a band and orchestra. "Of course, you are working with different instruments and repertoire," he said, "but the basic conducting principles are the same."

Another concept of conducting which Mr. Smith holds to be true is that if an instrumentalist can vocalize a difficult passage he will be better able to play it.

"You have to be able to hear the passage before you can play it and you cannot sing it if you can't hear it," Smith said. "Once you have vocalized a passage, you are sure of it in your ear and it becomes much easier to play."

Mr. Smith has the usual wealth of stories collected by all musicians who tour with an orchestra. "I remember one that happened right here in Lexington when the Philadelphia Symphony appeared on the Concert Lecture Series about three years ago. Our first oboist . . . (You know how oboists are; their reeds never quite suit them and they are always making a new one) . . . anyway, ours was in the mood for a new reed and he decided to find a nice quiet place in the Coliseum to do his work. Well, he found a place and was busily engaged in reed making when an irate janitor came and collared him and booted him out saying that he was in a restricted area! It seems there were secret basketball plays being kept in that area."

Mr. Smith loves to conduct and it shows through in his work with a band or orchestra. He has an unusual ability to get the response he desires from a group. During the UK clinic, he worked with the Lafayette high school band and the Henry Clay high school orchestra.

"I am impressed with the seriousness of the music students in Lexington and at the University," he said. "The very scheduling of a clinic such as this is indication of seriousness on their part, and I am quite pleased."

The MENC brought Mr. Smith to the campus with its own funds and offered the clinic free of charge to all students and interested townspeople.

Delta Gamma Groundbreaking Slated Sunday

Delta Gamma sorority will break ground for its new house Sunday.

The groundbreaking ceremony will begin at 2 p.m. at the corner of Columbia and Pennsylvania Avenues, where construction of the building is to begin in June.

A tea will be held at the Presbyterian Center, 416 Rose St., following the event to honor the groundbreaking and to recognize the senior women of the sorority. The Louisville Alumnae Association will present awards to the outstanding members.

Miss Stacia Yadon, president of the UK Delta Gamma chapter, said she hopes the house will be ready for occupation by next January.

Oxford, Miss., (AP)—The chancellor of the University of Mississippi said that year-end faculty resignations total 16—four more than the average. A survey indicates the segregation crisis of last fall may take an even greater toll of the faculty.

'Age Of Reform' Is Study Of Three Eras

By RICHARD WILSON

Professor Richard Hofstadter's "The Age of Reform" is an interesting analysis of one of America's most historically energetic eras.

The years to which he gives this tab span from 1890 to the end of World War II. Within this span, three different, but related, movements occurred which did much toward shaping the social conscience of our nation.

"This era has set the tone of American politics for the greatest part of the 20th Century," the author states in the book's introduction.

Hofstadter has divided his book into three main phases. The first is the agrarian uprising which culminated in the Populist movement and the Bryan presidential campaign of 1896.

This is followed by a survey of the Progressive and New Deal movements.

The book emphasizes the interplay of the contrasting Populist and Progressive movements. It was the social evolution of these two movements that initiated a reform era so necessary at this point of American history.

Hofstadter makes no pretension that these three movements, individually or jointly, did bring reform to the necessary degree. But it was a beginning.

It was upon the conflict between the rural and urban interests that the era was initiated. With the advent of Progressivism, American government took on the form of bureaucracy and industrial discipline which it has retained to the present.

The author lends little emphasis to the historical movements per se of the era. Instead, he concentrates on the ideas of those who made these events part of the history of these years. As he states, "My theme is the conception the participants had of their work and the place it would occupy in the larger stream of our history."

The book is guaranteed to hold the interest of political and history buffs and will at least broaden the perspective of those not so avidly interested in American political history. The author's concentration of what the reformers thought, rather than only what they did, intensifies The Age of Reform's readability. The book is available at Kennedy's.

W.A.A. Softball Tournament Crowns Champion Monday

By ANNE TUCKER
Kernel W.A.A. Writer

Monday afternoon is final exam time for the teams in the women's softball tournament and if last night's games come out as expected the championship game could be a rematch of last season.

In that title game, Delta Zeta defeated Kappa Kappa Gamma.

man Hall and followed up with a second win over Dillard House, the team that knocked Alpha Delta Pi out in the first round.

Kappa Kappa Gamma opened against Chi Omega and then downed the Town Team, victor over Blazer Hall and Alpha Gamma Delta.

The tennis eliminations will also wind up next week.

In this week's first round, Gracie Austin and Sue Bradbury, Delta Delta Delta, defeated Ann Maglinger and Ann McDonough, Kappa Delta. Sue Whiddon and Felicia Trader playing for Holmes Hall won over Mary Duncan and Rosemary Reiser of Kappa Kappa Gamma. Brenda Wilson and Lee Wayne Bramlege of the Town Team were defeated in play by Kappa Kappa Gamma's Jeanne Rich and Elsie Barr, and Nancy Park and Lanny Grosscup teamed for Alpha Xi Delta won over Barbara Brookhart and Ann Jacobs, Kappa Delta.

The remaining rounds of tennis doubles will be played by May 24.

In this year's semifinals, Delta Zeta and Pi Beta Phi met in the upper bracket while Kappa Kappa Gamma and Keeneland met in the lower bracket. (Both games were played last night, after the Kernel went to press.)

The 18-team eliminations have been running since April. In the upper bracket, Delta Zeta had to win over Alpha Xi Delta and Delta Delta Delta to reach the semifinals, while Pi Beta Phi was surviving games with Kappa Delta and Delta Gamma.

In the lower bracket, Keeneland opened by defeating Bow-

KENTUCKY GOLF TEAM TEES OFF ON LOUISVILLE

JIM GRACEY gives Kentucky's golf team an international flavor. Born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, he has lived in Windsor, Ontario, Canada, and moved to Marion, Ohio for his high school days. Gracey attended Harding high school and led them to a 30-3 team record during his stay, posting a 31-2 individual record. He was medalist for the Buckeye Conference Tournament, runnerup in the 1959 Northern Ohio Seniors Tournament and seventh in the state high school tournament.

He is our number six man primarily because he always starts the season slowly and comes on fast during the latter half. This happened this year as usual, but this time it was strictly by accident. Gracey pulled a ligament in his hand and missed five matches. Since his return, he has been low man for three straight matches.

Like Knight, Gracey plans to enter med school. He is a junior.

RICHARD GRACEY

SMITTY HOSKINS

The Kentucky golf team, having ended conference and national competition, head for Louisville this afternoon for their annual grudge match with the University of Louisville.

Somewhat akin to the Tennessee football game anyway, this afternoon's match will carry an extra attraction. The two greatest young amateurs in the Blue Grass, U.L. star Jim Farrell and UK star Don Heilman, clash head-on.

Farrell, who was so outstanding in high school that Louisville created a special scholarship just to land him on their golf team, has blazed a merry trail for the Cardinals this spring. He has just returned from the climax of that season, having won the individual championship of the Missouri Valley Conference.

The two met previously in the Southern Intercollegiate Tournament. Farrell finished four strokes ahead of Heilman, 297-301, although he lost to a North Texas State player for the top score.

CHUCK KIRK follows in the footsteps of his brother Johnny, who was captain of the 1961 Kentucky team and one of our top golfers in the last decade. This younger Kirk was a four time letterman at Maysville High School, under coach Orville Hayes. He placed third in the 1960 state tournament, and was Club Champion at Maysville. Kirk is the number five man for Kentucky.

A history major who plans to enter law school, he was elected last year to Keys, sophomore men's honorary.

CHUCK KIRK

DON HEILMAN

DON HEILMAN is the number one golfer for the Wildcats, a consistently low-scoring player who has won several honors. He played high school golf at Franklin County High School where he was regional runnerup his senior year. His high school coach was Archie Powers, former Kentucky footballer. Heilman also played football and basketball.

He won the Governor's Invitational Tournament at Frankfort two different times, in 1961 and 1962. In 1959 he captured the Tates Creek Invitational.

Now a junior, Heilman is majoring in Commerce. He was born in Louisville and has lived at various times in Alabama and Indiana.

He is on a partial scholarship.

JUDDY KNIGHT

JUDDY KNIGHT, the number two man on the team, is in his last season of competition and, this afternoon, his last match. He will enter Dental school next fall. Knight has compiled a record equal to that of Heilman. He finished third in the state high school tournament his senior year at Danville High School. While in high school, he also lettered four years in football and three years in track and basketball.

Knight won the Stoner Creek Invitational Tournament in Bourbon County, and has been runnerup in the Danville Invitational twice.

He is not spectacular but is consistent and it is probably because of his presence that Kentucky finished sixth in the Southeastern Conference Tournament, although they earned no individual honors.

UK Livestock Team Wins Three Prizes

The UK Livestock Judging Team recently won the North Central Collegiate Livestock Judging Contest held at the University of Wisconsin. In addition to being the overall high team, the team was high in sheep and third in cattle and hogs.

Dale Lovell, Sturgis, was second high individual. Russell Sutton, Lancaster, was third, and Seldon Little, Nicholasville, ranked sixth among 90 contestants.

Clifford Meyer of Louisville was the high man in sheep judging.

Other team members were Rodney Brookshire, Carlisle; James Brown, Lexington; Robert Golden, Goshen, Ohio; Robert Kunkel, Independence; James Mabry, Olive Hill; Roy Roberts, Atlanta, Ga., and Shelby Woodring, Morganfield.

Illinois Normal, University of Illinois, Michigan State University, Ohio State University, Pennsylvania State University, Purdue University, University of West Virginia, and University of Wisconsin were the schools competing in the annual event.

Engineers Awarded $10,000 Grant

The University of Kentucky Department of Engineering Mechanics has received a $10,000 instructional scientific equipment grant from the National Science Foundation.

The money will be used primarily to buy mechanical measuring equipment for undergraduate instruction. Major purchases will include strain-measuring devices, acceleration and force measuring instruments, and photoelastic equipment for optically measuring stresses.

Dr. Norman C. Small, head of the department, said the sum will be matched by University funds.

Summer's coming, get going!

If this isn't a great time to get yourself a new Chevrolet—well, we just don't know when is. Why, you'd almost have to be anti-summer not to let one of these four convertibles get to you. Or any of Chevrolet's sedans, wagons, sport coupes and sport sedans, for that matter.

And there are a lot of other buy-now reasons besides the season. Like the care-free feeling you get on a long vacation trip in a brand-new car. And it's a smart time to trade, what with your Chevrolet dealer all stocked up for a busy summer. Chances are, he has just the model and color you want—be it Chevrolet, Chevy II, Corvair or Corvette—ready to go right now.

So maybe now you're all wound up? Then spring into summer at your Chevrolet dealer's.
